

Carrie lives in Butler with her husband David and their son Aidan. Aidan is a 23-year high functioning young man on the autism spectrum. Aidan has two part-time competitive jobs in Butler that he enjoys. The Todd's also have two daughters, Clarissa and Madeline, both of who are married, and each have two children of their own.

In order to work as Aidan's advocate during his school age years, Carrie became self-employed as an owner/operator of a medical transcription service.

Carrie served on the Autism Taskforce for the state of Pennsylvania.

Carrie's educational background includes a Bachelor of Science degree from Robert Morris University in Professional Communication and Information Systems. She earned a Master's degree at the University of Pittsburgh in Library and Information Science with a focus on medical librarianship.

In May of 2017 Carrie began working for Community Care Connections, Inc. where she was the Program Coordinator for the In-Home & Community Participation Program. In this position she utilized her experience to help others with disabilities including autism integrate into their communities.

Carrie has attended numerous trainings on autism including most recently Functional Assessment Behavioral Training, Autism SPeCTRUM Training, Discovery and Job Development & Negotiations by Marc Gold & Associates, Employment Services, Understanding Social Security Disability Benefits, and Community Participation Supports. She also attended Temple University Summer Institute on Community Participation in 2017.

Carrie is our Director of Planning and Development where she is focusing on new programs such as Service Dogs and creating and developing additional partnership with a variety of local arts communities.
